[The New York Crayon tells the following beautiful Eastern story.]

Hassan, the wood cutter, from morn till night
Toiled at his heavy task among the trees
With willing hand; and, with a heart upright,
Three times a day he prayed upon his knees.

At last, long years of work had worn his strength;
His arm no more could level hearty blows;
And scarcely would his toll at greatest length
Supply the simple wants the poor man knows.

Still he worked cheerful on, with humble trust
That for his needs the Lord would yet provide.
One day he prayed—"O Prophet! O Most Just!
Who hold'st the highest place by Allah's side;

"Thy servant now is poor, and weak, and old;
And still, if Allah bids, will labor on;
But if the prayer be right, and not too bold,
Do thou pray for him that his task be done.

"Pray the Most Wise that to a single day
The allotted earnings of my life be sent;
Then let my breath pass peacefully away,
And in abundance let my labors end."

That night the wood cutter in slumber lay,
When to his sleeping eyes a vision came—
The Prophet's form, shining with light like day;
The Prophet's voice addressed him by his name:

"Hassan, thy prayer is heard; life's lengthened years
The Almighty crowds into a single day;
To-morrow's sunset ends thy cares and fears,
To-morrow brings thy age's destined pay."

With morning's dawn the old man grateful wakes,
And, duly turning westward, kneels in praise;
As his prayer-carpet from the ground he takes,
A heap of money meets his startled gaze.

The Almighty's gift he knows. "To-day, my last—
The day on which my labors all are done—
Shall, with this bounty, happily be passed,
And others' blessings greet my setting sun."

A feast he makes—he welcomes in the poor,
And gives him a single meal he saves.
The feast is finished; at the open door
A stranger stands, who for admission craves.

"Have pity on an outcast; give me food,
And peace rest on thee." With quick reply,
"Come, eat with me," says Hassan; "God is good!
What matter if withal a meal I die?"

The stranger ate, and grateful, took his way.
Hassan was left alone, when once again
A cry disturbed the calm of closing day—
The cry of one in hunger's bitter pain.

The old man hastens to help the beggar in,
And gives him all that for himself he meant;
Wishing, indeed, he had more plenty been,
And feeling in his heart a sweet content.

Fasting, but peaceful, Hassan slept that night.
The blessings of the poor to heaven rise,
And, borne by angels clothed in holy light,
Enter the pearly gates of Paradise.

That night, once more, the Prophet's form appeared;
He spoke to Hassan, and he sweetly smiled;
"The blessings of the poor the Lord has heard;
The Lord approves thee as his worthy child.

"And now he bids thee, as his steward, live—
Live out thy destined, lengthened years below;
To thee his gracious hand will freely give,
And what he gives do thou again bestow."

Long years in happiness old Hassan lived;
The poor prayed for him; Allah heard their prayers;
And, when life closed, he that pure joy received
Which for his faithful the Most High prepares.

VARIETY.

He that a borrowing goes returns a sorrowing.
If you would know the value of money, go and try to borrow some.

The eye of the master will do more work than both his hands.

What maintains one vice would bring up two children.

Home comprises all the space that a woman should desire to shine in.

The world can never be wiser than when it knows that it knows nothing.

The man who couldn't "trust his feelings" is supposed to do business on the cash principle.

A Yankee has invented a plague which kills off all who do not pay the printer. It has played sad havoc in New England.

We often hear of a man "being in advance of his age," but who ever heard of a woman being in the same predicament?

She that marries a man because he is a "good match," must not be surprised if he turns out "a Lucifer."

Is there no way to bring home a wandering sheep
but by worrying him to death?—Thomas Fuller.

A benevolent gentleman used to give away wood to the poor by the cord, in order, as he said, to have it re-corded above.

There is a ballet dancer connected with Niblo's so theatrical in her nature that she feeds on eggs laid by canary birds. She is the young lady who walks up a moon-beam.

May not taste be compared to that exquisite sense of the bee, which instantly discovers and extracts the quintessence of every flower, and disregards all the rest of it?—Greenville.

Remember that every person, however low, has rights and feelings. In all contentions let peace be rather your object than triumph. Value triumph as the means of peace.—Sydney Smith.

It is confidently asserted that the married ladies of Sonora have formed a society for the purpose of inquiring into the character of marriageable young men. This is a great, grand project; but involves, we fear, extreme peril to the philanthropists engaged.

No PERVERSION.—Naaman was a mighty man, but he was a leper. Every man has some but or other in his character—something that blenishes and diminishes him—some alloy in his grandeur—some damp to his joy; he may be very happy—very good; yet, nor so happy as he should be. Naaman was as great as the world could make him; and yet, as Bishop Hall remarks, the basest slave in Syria would not have changed skins with him.—Mat. Henry.

NEVER SATISFIED.—Nobody is satisfied in this world.
If a legacy is left a man, he regrets it is not larger.
If he finds a sum of money, he searches the spot for more. If he is elected to some high office he wishes for a better one. If he is a single man, he is looking out for a wife, and if married, for children. Man is never satisfied.
